

ABSTRACT

A projection system projects a pixelized color images onto a display surface. The projection system includes a light source, an interferometric modulator, and a reflective light modulator. The interferometric modulator is configured to modulate the wavelength of light and reflect modulated light toward the display surface. The reflective light modulator is disposed to receive light from the light source and selectively reflect the light toward the interferometric modulator and the display surface.